TWITTER IMAGE SIZES

Twitter is a social media site that uses a lot of pictures, so it's crucial to use the right sizes for your images to make your posts look great. On Twitter, the size and shape of your images matter, especially for desktop and mobile.

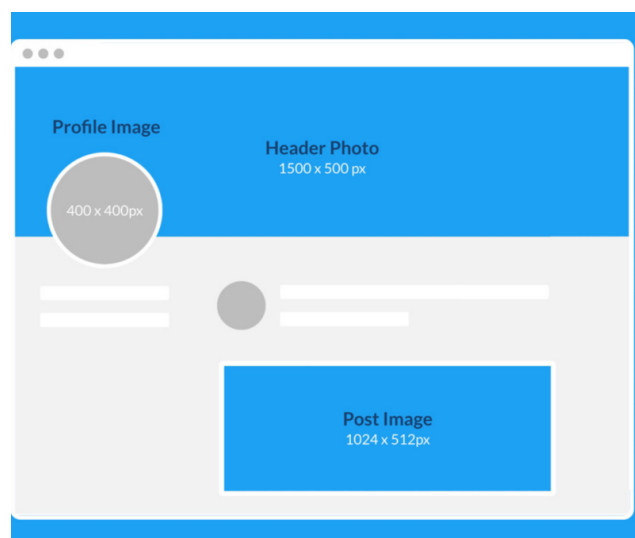

Header Image

The header image is the big picture at the top of your profile page on social media. It's a cool way to show off your brand or personality. For the best look, make sure your header image is 1500 pixels wide and 500 pixels tall, with a shape that's three times wider than it is tall (aspect ratio 3:1).

Profile Image

The profile image is the little icon by your username that shows up in your tweets and replies. For a good look, make sure your profile picture is 400 pixels wide and 400 pixels tall, with a shape that's equal on all sides (aspect ratio 1:1).

Tweet Image

For a good-looking tweet, use an image that's at least 1024 x 512 pixels (wider than it is tall) but no bigger than 1600 x 900 pixels. This makes your picture fit nicely and look great for your followers.

However, you can also post in square size by 1080 x 1080 pixels.
